At Hongkong, on the 30th inst., FLORINDA MARIA, daughter of Isidoro and Florida Leon, aged two years and two months. [22]

The Hongkong Telegraph.

HONGKONG, SATURDAY, JANUARY 31, 1891.

THE longer we live the more we learn and if we could only live long enough and the China Mail continues to drag along its tottering-lily-of-fascination, if uneventful existence, the day may yet come when sapient Solomon in all his pristine glory will be a very bad third in the race for the Wisdom laurel wreath to the Editor and his 'one-reader.' It is really one of the greatest of surprising wonders how a single head, and such a head ye gods!—can contain the marvellous amount of information on all subjects living or dead, which in choice and happy phrase and epithet is to be found in nightly instalments, sparkling like dewdrops on a lion's mane and illuminating the columns of that too utterly awful representative of Hongkong journalism. This original, who in his own remarkable person combines at least a fair sprinkling of the traditional qualities of various ancient and modern celebrities—to wit, the worldly sanctimoniousness of that pillar of truth, the Rev. TOBIAS SNUFFLE; the elastic political principles and 'great mon' worship and toadyism of the stiff-necked but supple-backed and accommodating Sir PERTINAX MAC-SVOOPHANT; the well washed and carefully starched self-sufficiency of that most admirable type of arch-humbug, Mr. PECKSNIFF; and the extreme veracity and vivid colouring of the imaginative Baron MUNCHHAUSEN;—spurns the bald-headed intention of hiding his light under a bushel, and strives might and main, albeit in a rather halting and superficial way, to construct a new world of proselytes by liberally diffusing pearls of wisdom and chunks of worldly information amongst a limited collection of the benighted inhabitants of this out-of-the-way but comfortable and remunerative refuge for officials too dazzlingly brilliant to be retained at home, and haven of rest for the lowly and lamb-like beach-comber. This organiser of a new crusade, even with all his talent and foresight, has possibly just failed to quite realize the situation; his Titanic intellect, missing the most pressing needs of a community in dire distress, and overburdened with the hidden difficulties of a problem which, he has told us, has greatly exercised many powerful minds in the brilliant and select circles of rank and fashion for which the colony of Hongkong has ever stood pre-eminent in Britain's Colonial Empire, may even have ventured beyond its natural capacity in daring emulation of JULIUS CAESAR (or some other defunct prodigy whose great ambition was to be able to say "Alone I did it"); however in missing the substance he had better luck with the shadow and has at least achieved something. As a Jubilee poet play-actor who lived unhonoured and unsung, but who was spared the indignity of being made a Companion of St. Mickey and Goroze of that ilk, tritely remarks

No human quality is so well worn, Is woe and woe, but there's some few left.

And so we must even be thankful for small mercies and will end this prologue by singing that touching hymn "Oh! let us be joyful!"

Now for the play! so 'hats off.' As a final contribution to the Jubilee rejoicings it is intended to hold a Fancy Dress Ball at Government House on Tuesday next, and of this fact we were accidentally reminded this morning by having a visit paid us by a representative from the leading local 'fashion emporium' who kindly invited us to come and see the goodly show of raiment of this and other ages,—the dresses of kings and courtiers, etc., which had been specially manufactured for the occasion. Then it came upon us with the force of a run-away avalanche and on looking up the Court Journal, alias the China Mail, we found the Editor thereof had already announced to the fashionable world, with due solemnity and becoming regret, "that many powerful minds are greatly exercised as to the dress which may be worn on this State occasion."

We would stop to shed a tear at this stage in sympathy with the proprietors of the "powerful minds" but that little ceremony has not been provided for in the acting edition of this latest comedy and therefore it has necessarily to be omitted. And now "the Archimedean lever" comes to the rescue with a grand rush and wins on the post by a head—and a pair of long ears. "It may be interesting to know," he says with patronising urbanity, "that Court dress may be worn by any gentleman, whether he has been presented at Home or not." Let us take a deep breath after this soul-stirring disclosure, and offer up a special thanksgiving, that there is still something in this dreary world worth living for, something glorious to hanker after. Only picture it ye high-toned and sweetly scented marshes! By the gracious condescension of the Editor of the China Mail you will now be permitted to 'fret your weary head' at the Government House 'terpsichorean' extravaganza arrayed in Court dress, whether you have been presented at Home or not; free of any extra charge you may display your shanks in silk stockings—what rapture!—and ape nobility in an embroidered coat and the richly-gilded sword of ancient chivalry. You may also carry a three-cornered hat under your left arm, in that elegant style which you will see illustrated in the latest fashion plates at the select tailoring establishments of the town. For one night only, whether you are but a quill-driver in a Government office, bank, or mercantile firm, an assistant in the "rag" or tea business at a leading hong or store, a nomadic broker or wild-cat company promoter—in fact no matter what you are professionally or otherwise you are at perfect liberty to imagine yourself a grandee of the 'first chop,' and wear Court dress—by kind permission of the Snail man.

There is something more; our fashionable colleague has made another startling discovery. Those of the élite who may lack the courage requisite to face the music and possible ridicule of unfeeling scoffers in a Court suit, have been carefully provided for. The oracle again speaks:—"Another modification for men—not gentlemen this journey, kindly observe—will likewise be acceptable by many searchers after dress, viz: the Marlborough House dress and facings. This consists of a dress coat with facings and cuffs, white or flowered waistcoat, knee-breeches (of the same cloth as the coat), black silk stockings, shoes and buckles." There now, gallants of Hongkong! What think ye of all that finery? It is neat and becoming, the Society Editor says, and specially suitable to the present conditions of the colony. And you can wear it all at one time, no matter whether you have been "presented" at Marlborough House or not. Probably you have not been honored so far by gracious Royalty, but it will answer exactly the same purpose if you can only imagine that you have 'bent the knee,' and nobody will be hurt or any the wiser. And when the curtain drops on the glittering scene and the Jubilee revelries, the gilded halls, the fair women and especially the brave men in Court dresses and Marlborough House suits, have given place to the everyday shoddy, we all know so well, some permanent memorial should be publicly erected to the benefactor of his species who deserves so well of the junior dork he has so nobly rescued from oblivion. A mud statue of "Brownie" in a court suit with the motto "Parva leve capunt animas," would be an appropriate ornament to Talping-shan and at the same time fittingly perpetuate an exhibition of drivelling Idiocy that is remarkable even in this home of abject pusillanimity. If after all some happy possessor of the Marlborough House dress and facings has been quietly playing on the weakness of our editorial colleague for an express purpose—well to him we give the free suggestion that after he has donned his tatty costume and aired himself sufficiently, he turns right-about to study for a time that expressive and instructive story of the masquerading jackass who played the goat in the lion's skin.

FOUR of the fastest printers in the United States recently took part in a foot race, best two in three heats, at Twickenham Park for a purse offered by J. S. Barnes, manager of the Spoken baseball team. The contestants were E. D. Skinner, C. F. Welshrener (alias C. F. Gibson), John Flynn, and Jack Gibson, better known as "English" Gibson. E. D. Skinner and C. F. Gibson ran the first heat. Skinner won in 91 seconds. John Flynn and Jack Gibson ran the second, Gibson winning in 91 seconds. The winners of the two heats contested the decisive heat on account of the lateness of the hour until the following Sunday. Particulars of the final heat are not yet to hand.

A PERSON named Chapman has started to deliver a course of lectures throughout Australia on some hazy object of fact or animal which threatens to undermine what he calls the "Protestant succession" to the British throne. The old Orange fanatic can never understand that the world has moved on a little since the siege of Derry. There will be no British throne at all soon, and no "succession," and as the only duty of a sovereign is to draw an enormous screw and hunt up pensions for her sisters, and her cousins, and her uncles, it doesn't matter whether she is Protestant or a Mohammedan, or a cow-and-cat warbler, or an individual who attends the tabernacle. The matter isn't of the slightest importance, anyway.

THE Austrian Government has been experimenting with the new smokeless powder in some military manoeuvres in Hungary, and feels bad over the result. One army was hidden among some woods on the side of a hill, while the other was supposed to be attacking the position, and the stationary force pounded away for four hours without once giving the enemy a chance to discover its position. The pale-grey uniforms were completely lost among the trees and scrub; the flashes were so slight that they were invisible to ordinary range; and as for the reports they were mixed and multiplied by the echoes till they seemed to be everywhere, and nowhere in particular. The British soldier in his glaring, blood-red coat will have a cheerful and refreshing time in the next campaign. He is the most conspicuous fighting man in the world, and unless he takes off his clothes and goes into battle with nothing on but his gun and his boots he is bound to be exterminated. But when two such armies as the Austrians and Germans meet, the one which hides itself most effectively will win, and if both hide equally well then the one which sneers first and thereby betrays its situation must go under.

IN Abyssinia, Mr. Mansfield Parkyns tells us on the night before a wedding festivities take place both at the house of the bridegroom and at the house of the bride, during which the "debauch," or war dance, is from time to time performed.

On the wedding-day the bridegroom and his friends go to the bride's house, all riding on mules, armed with guns, swords, and lances, and dressed in fine clothes—clothes, arms, and mules being often lent by some great man for the occasion. "When arrived near the bride's house the nearest convenient plain is selected, and the horsemen commence galloping about, the gunners fire off their matchlocks, and the lancers dash here and there, enacting altogether a sort of sham fight. This, I suppose (says Mr. Parkyns) is done to divert the bridegroom's mind." On entering the house the bridegroom's friends and the bride's range themselves on opposite sides of it. The man expresses his willingness to marry the girl; the arrangements with the father are concluded; and then the bridegroom takes his bride, and sans cérémonie turns her out giving her into the charge of his friends outside the door. He returns to join in the "debauch," or war-dance, in which both parties engage.

This dance is performed by men armed with shields and lances, who with bounds, leaps, and springs attack others armed with guns, so as to approach them, and at the same time avoid their fire, while the gunners make similar demonstrations, and at last fire off their guns, either in the air or into earth, and then, drawing it, sword, flourish them about as a flourish. By-and-by the bride is carried off on mule, with one of the bridesmaids seated behind her. She appears to be treated on the wedding-night by the bridegroom and his bride as a woman who had fallen into the hands of a war party might have been.

WE hear that Mr. A. Chut manager of the Formosa Trading Corporation, lessee of the K-lung coal mines and agent for the steamers Smith and Cass sails for Tamsui by the Smith (Capt. Leffer) to-morrow morning where he will, it is said, inspect the mines prior to returning to this Colony.

At the Police Court this morning Lieut. Donohue, R.A., charged his cook, a Chinaman, for embezzling about $30 during the present month. "The cook received various sums of money during the month to buy 'chow,' but he pocketed the money and got his master's provisions 'on strap.' Of course the commandant presented his bill and the cook was booked. Mr. Donohue remanded the case, allowing the cook his liberty in two sureties of $100 each."

WE made mention in last night's issue of a cowardly assault that had been committed upon a Sikh policeman a few nights ago on the Kennedy Road, by a soldier, and this morning Private Abrahams Wilson was charged in connection with the affair. The constable picked him out from amongst 207 of his comrades, but he stoutly denied the charge. Mr. de Bovis, who witnessed the assault, could not swear the defendant was the "wanted," and said he thought the latter had fair whippers (7), few soldiers have such and the defendant was not one of the few. The case was remanded.

THE cry is still there come. Another company, which has been fathered and fostered by Messrs. Holmes and Roddy, solicitors of this colony, has just been registered under the style of "The Southern Times Printing and Publishing Company, Ltd." with a capital of £25,000, fully subscribed, with the object of starting a new native paper in Canton. The capital is mainly foreign, and was readily found. The Kowloon is the only paper at present published in the vernacular in the City of Rums is absolutely under the thumb of the Mandarins, and its policy is of course shaped to suit the official palate. The new paper which is to bear the title of Ling Nam Yat Pao, will we understand, be quite independent and for this reason should have a highly prosperous career before it. The first issue is to appear on the 2nd proximo and we heartily wish our celestial contemporary fair weather and every success.

MÓ LO YUNG, the man reported yesterday as having poisoned himself when under arrest at Macao in connection with Namam piracy affair, is no less an individual than the 'speculator' who planned both the Greyhound (so it is said) and, at any rate, the Namam outrages. He boiled from Macao recently, where he was ostensibly carrying on the business of a merchant, and finding the Chinese were on his track he put back to his quarters in the Holy City with the result that the Portuguese arrested him with the intention of sending him on to Canton to pry over the business with the lairds of the Pottery-Yard. Rather than do that this dangerous criminal swallowed poison and thereby ended a no doubt eventful career by cheating the Viceroys' making preparations for his reception when the news reached him that the modern All Baba's confidence man, inter alia an ex-detective, had quietly "departed this life" some hours previously.

SUNDAY bones and other remains were discovered lately on the Canterbury Plains (N.Z.), and a local editor spends himself on the subject thus:—"The spot where the discovery was made is lonely, desolate, and exceedingly dreary—just the place which seemed fitted to be the scene of a tragedy. The road winds round the edge of a patch of dark woodland, and on the other side is a stretch of swampy ground, while in neither direction is a single habitation visible. Between the fence and the swamp, hidden among the long grass and scrub, the remains were found, &c." In connection with this the Bulletin lets off its gun thusly:—"There is a certain amount of detective power in these lines, but still the place does not fill the bill, and a dead body possessed of reasonable discrimination ought always to harmonize as much as possible with its surroundings. Any common, ordinary corpse might be satisfied to be found on the edge of a swamp, but one that has an eye to dramatic effect would be discovered in a cave on a murky night, when the rain is falling with a sudden, squally sound among the dead leaves, and the proceedings should be accompanied, if possible, by thunder. Arrangements should be made for having a blasted tree close to the spot with a raven in it. Also the voice of a ghost should be heard in the distance, and there should be a clanking of chains, and a loud shriek, and a strange rushing sound in the air, accompanied by groans. Furthermore, the spectres of the deceased ancestors should gibber among the tree trunks, unless otherwise engaged, or 'blinded by the weather.' Circumstances though, illness, or inability to catch the omnibuses, and a cold shower—if one can be procured—should pervade the atmosphere. And these things having been duly provided, we would lay on a dull, sickening thud of some kind—even if the thud is an outside circumstance with no possible bearing on the case, it doesn't matter and we would have a dismal morose in the background with a slay reptile attached, and then the tragedy would be about complete. The mangled victim who is found under such conditions as these, and the ordinary newspaper victim who is discovered in a bald, unflattering way with no surroundings worth speaking of are two entirely distinct victims; and even a penny paper should be able to appreciate the difference."
